

Can Trump Base Crush the COVID Cult Bug-People?

Description

by Marko Marjanovi?

I am so sick and tired of Donald Trump, but the other side is literally the COVID Rouge personified. He has been bad on COVID (remember March-April), as he has been bad on the Empire, but at least he is a dull, feckless, cowardly, narcissistic, evil little dilettante rather than the blob personified.

There are a number of people arguing that the MSM polls projecting a landslide win for Biden do not pass the eye test. Most voters when asked who they think will win answer Trump.

That might be the better outcome. There is an element of a hostage situation in the Democratic strategy where they threaten to continue dynamiting the country with riots and virus measures if they do not get their way on November 3rd, but there is no firm guarantee there would be a let up (particularly on the virus front) even if their demands were met.

To the contrary, they have been talking for months now how the homicidal shutdowns have been a godsend for “climate” and paternalistic technocracy.

Hope they are denied and we get to drink some COVID Rouge tears two weeks from now, but at the same time, we shouldn’t fool ourselves into thinking there is that much riding on the upcoming poll.

A big turnout of the anti-Dem base will simply mean that the etatist coastal liberals continue to control the media, the academia, and the bureaucracies, and have a pliant and clueless weenie in the White House, but at least they would not control it outright.

So instead of holding 100% of the power, they will hold 80%, but without any ownership of the outcome. It is a recipe for continued instability and dysfunction, but might be marginally better than the full-on virus Stalinism they promise if they get every last bit of the power.

Either way somebody awful is going to lose, and if you are an Iranian, a Venezuelan or a Palestinian you are probably rightfully rooting for it to be Trump. For everyone else, it's probably better if it's the camp that is still threatening to mandate muzzles, supposedly to counter a virus that isn't countered by them and that has a survival rate in the ballpark of the common flu.

Attitudes and Behaviors Related to COVID-19, by Party and Gender<sup>A</sup>

	Democratic men	Democratic women	Republican men	Republican women
	%	%	%	%
Worried about getting the coronavirus	77	80	20	29
Concerned about exposure at place of work <sup>AA</sup>	57	62	23	39
Always practicing social distancing	54	57	19	29
Avoiding going to public places	70	73	31	38
Avoiding small gatherings (friends/family)	63	64	27	30
Avoiding events with large crowds	88	89	48	60
Always wear mask in indoor settings when can't socially distance	80	83	40	56
Always wear mask in outdoor settings when can't socially distance	36	39	10	15
Ready to return to normal activities right now	5	3	64	64

<sup>A</sup> Responses may not total 100%. <sup>AA</sup> Based on adults employed full or part time.

GALLUP PANNEL, AUG. 2-SEPT. 21, 2020