

The Israel Vaccine Crisis Should Be A Warning To The World

Description

The massive surge of COVID-19 infections in Israel, one of the most vaccinated countries on earth, is nothing less than a disaster. The Israel vaccine crisis should be a warning to the rest of the world.

Image not found or type unknown

Earlier in April, the Israeli Peoples Committee (IPC), a civilian body made of leading Israeli health experts, published its report into the Pfizer vaccine's side effects indicating damage to almost every system in the human body.

If the findings by IPC were genuine, then Pfizer vaccine was linked to more deaths in Israel than AstraZeneca's in the whole of Europe.

In June, there were several days with zero new COVID infections in Israel. The country launched its national vaccination campaign in December last year and has one of the highest vaccination rates in the world, with 80 percent of citizens above the age of 12 fully inoculated.

COVID, most Israelis thought, had been defeated. All restrictions were lifted and Israelis went back to crowded partying and praying in mask-free venues.

Fast forward two months later: Israel reported 9,831 new diagnosed cases on Tuesday, a hairbreadth away from the worst daily figure ever recorded in the country—10,000—at the peak of the third wave.

More than 350 people have died of the disease in the first three weeks of August. In a Sunday press conference, the directors of seven public hospitals announced that they could no longer admit any coronavirus patients.

With 670 COVID-19 patients requiring critical care, their wards are overflowing and staff are at breaking point.

After vaccinating almost the entire country, now Israel is facing a major disaster.

"I don't want to frighten you," coronavirus czar Dr. Salman Zarka told the Israeli parliament this week. "But this is the data. Unfortunately, the numbers don't lie " reported The Daily Beast.

Israel vaccinated its population almost exclusively with the Pfizer/BioNTech vaccine.

But in early July, with citizens over the age of 60 almost completely vaccinated, Israeli scientists began observing a worrisome rise in infections—if not in severe illness and death—among the double-vaccinated.

Meanwhile, a new study has raised concerns about the mRNA vaccines' effectiveness revealing that Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine is only 42% effective against the Delta variant.

And what the officials are not saying is that, it is actually the people who have been fully vaccinated for COVID-19 yet still get infected with the delta strain are transmitting the infection to unvaccinated people.

Now, in order to resolve the vaccine-induced crisis caused by the failure of the two jabs, Israel again wants to vaccinate its population with booster shots.

As of this week, all Israelis over 30 will be eligible to receive booster shots. By the end of the month, they are expected to be universally available to anyone over the age of 12 who received their second vaccine five months or more ago.

Israel will then reconfigure its Green Passports, granting them only to the triple-vaccinated, and limiting their validity to six months.

In anticipation of this change, the number of unvaccinated Israelis getting their first shots has tripled since the beginning of August.

However, according to the world renowned Stanford University scientist Professor-Doctor Jayanta Bhattacharya and top global economist Donald Boudreaux, the idea of eradication of Covid is a dangerous and expensive fantasy.