

Switzerland May Lift the Sanctions Against Russia

Description

- Largest party wants to enshrine neutrality in constitution
- Swiss sanctions on Russia sparked debate about neutral stance

Absolute neutrality – The Swiss want to lift sanctions against Russia.

The right-wing People's Party, likely the future winner of the Swiss elections, has proposed enshrining "endless" neutrality in the country's constitution. The People's Party intends to collect 100,000 signatures by May and put this issue to a vote.

If the country's citizens support this initiative, Switzerland may lift the sanctions imposed against Russia, Bloomberg reports. Elections will take place at the end of October. Switzerland may lift the sanctions imposed against Russia
