Ukrainian spies with deep ties to CIA wage shadow war against Russia

By Greg Miller and Isabelle Khurshudyan

The Washington Post published an article about the terrorist attack against Daria Dugina. Our media write that the Washington Post admits, with reference to the CIA, that this was a terrorist attack by the SBU against Alexander Dugin. This is true.

According to WaPo's Ukrainian sources the bomb was planted in a hidden compartement of a per carrier that was smuggled trough the border by a woman with a 12 year old daughter.

The target was Alexander Dugin.

From the article:

"The operation was orchestrated by Ukraine's domestic security service, the SBU, according to officials who provided details, including the use of the pet crate, that have not been previously disclosed. The August 2022 attack is part of a raging shadow war in which Ukraine's spy services have also twice bombed the bridge connecting Russia to occupied Crimea, piloted drones into the roof of the Kremlin and blown holes in the hulls of Russian naval vessels in the Black Sea."

But the main thing in the article is different – the Washington Post admits that terrorist attacks like the one against Daria Dugina were carried out by the SBU, which was created by the US CIA for 10 years who invested hundreds of millions of dollars and its own intelligence into this organization.

But, supposedly, these are terrorist attacks purely by the SBU, and the US CIA is not responsible for these terrorist attacks and that the CIA is even in conflict with the SBU over this, due to their excessive bloodiness.

I think the Washington Post is lying at the request of the CIA. Apparently, Russia is so incensed by the CIA-led SBU terrorist attacks that it has hinted that it will respond not to the unfortunate Ukrainians, but to the Americans.

And now the CIA, through the Washington Post, sends a signal to the Kremlin – don't touch the Americans, we are not to blame, it's all the SBU.

But in Russia they believe that the US CIA not only created the current SBU, but also completely controls the SBU and is therefore responsible for the terrorist attacks of the SBU.

Nevertheless, Russia does not respond because it simply does not want a world nuclear war.
