

British Humor

Description

“Stand behind the yellow line, please. The next train will be here soon. Could the passenger with the juicy melons please step away from the yellow line? Passenger with juicy melons, please step away from the yellow line”: A fruit and vegetable incident on the London Underground.

It's such a form of British real-life humor, yes.